What is the Theatre Education Conference (TEC)? Who can attend?

TEC offers timely, innovative resources and support for theatre educators, inspiring them to grow their skills and advance the field of educational theatre. TEC features interactive workshops, inspiring keynotes, and abundant collaboration and mentorship opportunities for professional growth and continued learning. This year's conference is co-produced with Open Jar Studios in New York City, where the professional theatre industry meets the classroom.

TEC is open to all theatre educators and teachers, teaching artists, pre-service educators, higher education faculty, researchers, administrators and leaders. Educational Theatre Association (EdTA) members and those currently in graduate programs for theatre education receive a discount while registering for TEC.

What is Chapter Leadership Summit? Who can attend?

EdTA's Chapter Leadership Summit is an annual professional learning gathering designed to equip and inspire chapter leaders to advance theatre education locally. Through keynotes, role-specific breakout sessions, EdTA updates, and dedicated collaboration time, leaders share best practices, strengthen chapter operations, and build meaningful connections across the national network. The Summit blends practical leadership development with arts-centered community building so participants leave aligned, energized, and ready to serve students and educators in their chapters.

Chapter Leadership Summit is open exclusively to EdTA chapter leaders and chapter board members. Eligible attendees include chapter directors/presidents and board officers such as vice presidents, treasurers, secretaries, festival or event chairs, communications leads, technology coordinators, and other designated chapter leadership roles. This event is designed for volunteer leaders who guide and manage chapter programs; it is not a student event. If you are unsure whether your role qualifies, please contact Jay Gerlach (jgerlach@schooltheatre.org) before registering.
